

P

ELLIS FUNNY COLUMN

I have had this one mole on my chin for years. Several years ago, the doctor had tried to remove it during surgery while also removing several skin cancer spots, but the mole grew back with revenge and doubled in size. My grandbabies are always picking at it and I felt I wanted to take matters in my own hands as I was told that if you put gray tape on a mole it would smoothen it and it would eventually die. You will not see me running around with my pink camouflage tape on my chin, since I only put it on my face while I am at home and sleeping. Terry & I had been working around the house and I ran to the store for some items we needed. People usually look at me strange because of wearing only dresses and skirts, so I didn't think this time was any different until I had arrived back home and looked in the mirror thinking, how long have I had the tape on my face. You guessed it, I had worn the pink camouflage on my face and THAT was why everyone was looking strangely at me. Oh my, I do not understand why I am always the one being made fun of. But, I guess it is my own fault.
